

2016 Specialty Medication Listing

Updated December 2015*

Your pharmacy benefit program may include coverage for certain products referred to as Specialty Medications. Most Specialty Medications are injectables, however some may be oral or transdermal. Specialty Medications may be medications that you administer yourself or have a healthcare provider administer for you. The following is a list of medications considered Specialty Medications. As new medications that have similar indications enter the market, these products may be added to the program without notice. This list is subject to change — please consult Customer Service for an updated list. In many cases, these medications require prior authorization before dispensing. Medications marked with an (LD) are medications with a limited distribution program and distribution of these medications is usually from select specialty pharmacies directly to the patient, caregiver, or institution. Italicized and underlined medications are considered preferred.
